

Resonance

Transformation through harmony.

Resonance is a collection that explores the power of alignment — where pattern and purpose converge to create spaces that are both emotive and accessible. Rooted in design and inclusivity, this series translates visual rhythm into tactile clarity, bridging beauty and function.

Each element carries the essence of balance: movement and stillness, surface and depth, expression and guidance. Together, they form a palette that speaks not only to design excellence, but to lived experience — where patterns, colours, and finishes resonate across people and place.

Crafted for spaces that demand both vision and inclusivity, Resonance is a study in quiet strength. It elevates the everyday into the extraordinary, not through excess, but through integration.

Created for designers, facility managers, and clients, this collection serves as a ready-to-specify resource — streamlining the integration of Studio Z's emotive surface patterns with Made by Boto®'s compliant tactile signage. From wayfinding elements to ambient pattern overlays, Resonance delivers visual harmony and sensory clarity across high-traffic, high-impact environments.

1. Current

The rhythm of flow and direction.

Current captures the essence of movement — the subtle ripples of water, the sweep of air, the geometry of tides. Its flowing lines and layered hues bring energy into still surfaces, creating a sense of direction without force. Patterns are fluid yet controlled, offering rhythm and continuity that guide the eye and calm the atmosphere. Like water shaping stone, Current introduces motion that feels timeless and elemental.

2. Lumen

Light as orientation.

Lumen explores the transformative power of light — soft gradients, glowing transparencies, and subtle reflections that change with perspective. Its surfaces carry the quiet radiance of dawn mist and evening glow, creating environments that feel open and expansive. Lumen is both atmospheric and grounding, infusing interiors with clarity and brightness. It is design as illumination, guiding through ambience rather than boundary.

3. Keystone

Strength, contrast, foundation.

Keystone is the anchor of Resonance—solid, architectural, and enduring. Its deep tones and structural surfaces evoke permanence, bringing a sense of stability and balance to shifting environments. Matte finishes and stone-like textures ground the visual field, offering a quiet strength that supports the lighter, more transient motifs in the collection. Keystone is foundation distilled into form: weight, contrast, and presence.

Jindabyne
(Jin-duh-byne)

The name Jindabyne is derived from an Aboriginal word meaning "valley".

The town was originally located on the land now submerged by Lake Jindabyne, which was formed by the Jindabyne Dam as part of the Snowy Mountains Scheme.

The town was then relocated to its present position in the 1960s.

4. Magic

Bold contrasts, layered mystery.

Magic captures the alchemy of transition, turning the unseen into tangible form. Inspired by mist, flowing fabric, stardust, and the inexplicable veining of marble, it weaves subtle overlays that add depth without weight. Semi-transparent layers soften boundaries, blur thresholds, and invite pause, revealing beauty in the spaces between. Through muted tones and delicate gradients, Magic transforms the ordinary into the extraordinary, infusing every surface with movement, atmosphere, and a quietly enchanting, almost otherworldly presence.

5. Lemuria

Wisdom, balance, geometry.

Lemuria is structure refined. Its surfaces take cues from crystalline lattices, architectural grids, and balanced frameworks, offering patterns that are precise yet graceful. Tones and textures intersect in quiet order, creating rhythm in repetition and clarity in complexity. Lemuria introduces a framework for harmony, where geometry becomes a tool for orientation and calm.

6. Mylo

Organic connection, intuitive paths.

Mylo is a study of systems beneath the surface. Inspired by mycelial networks, branching trees, and the slow intelligence of nature, it brings a grounded, organic sensibility into built environments. With earthy tones and tactile motifs, Root expresses connection — a reminder that resilience is found not in isolation, but in the unseen bonds that hold everything together.

7. Nova

Reflective calm, luminous edges.

Nova captures the quiet drama of light at its edges — the shimmer of moonlight, the sheen of iridescence, the glow of a horizon line. Its reflective finishes and luminous tones bring a touch of radiance to architectural surfaces, softening solidity with glimmers of movement. Nova is subtle, never ostentatious, offering calm brilliance that elevates both the material and the mood of a space.

8. Mark

Symbols, language, clarity.

Mark is where surface becomes story. Inspired by carved scripts, etched metal, and the tactility of print, it turns motifs into meaning. Bold contrasts and finely detailed embossing give it weight and presence, while its clarity invites both recognition and reflection. Mark bridges communication and design, proving that symbols can carry both function and beauty in equal measure.

At Studio Z, our work is shaped by the quiet intelligence of nature—its rhythms, patterns and ability to guide us intuitively. In the same way light, texture and movement support orientation in the natural world, our designs help people of all abilities feel calm, included and at ease.

The Resonance Collection, paired with the inclusive tactile signage of Made by Boto®, forms a unified design language. Together, they create environments that are instinctive to navigate and reassuring to inhabit—where pattern, colour and accessibility work in harmony. All patterns can be specified across a wide range of finishes and signage applications, offering a cohesive toolkit for universally welcoming spaces.
